Unhelped by any wind. The owlet's cry
Came loud, - and hark again ! loud as before

Have left me to the solitude, which suits
Abstruser musings: save that at my side
My cradled infant slumbers peacefully.
- d) What thou art we know not ;
What is most like thee ?
From rainbow clouds there flow not
Drops so bright to see
As from thy presence showers a rain of melody.
- e) Thou wast not born for death, immortal Bird !

And ears like errant wings,
The devil's walking parody
On all four-footed things.

The tattered outlaw of the earth,
Of ancient crooked will ;
Starve, scourge, deride me ; I am dumb,
I keep my secret still.
Fools! For I also had my hour ;
One far fierce hour and sweet :
There was a shout about my ears,
And palms before my feet.

- b) People often say that the stars govern their fate but they forget the fact that success or failure is the result of one's own action. Is we sow chaff, we can't reap grain; the result or consequence of an action depends on what one does and to the extent he does it. If we work hard we succeed and we succeed only to the extent that we work. People who think that the law of Karma is supreme may feel that what one is destined to get he will always get whether he strives for it or not. But experience tells us that rewards and punishments are the direct results of our action; honesty and hard work never go unrewarded and dishonesty and evil deeds never go unpunished. In fact, even the law of Karma, in its proper sense, means that the fruit we get is decided by whatever action we did in the past. Shakespeare rightly pointed this out : "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars; but in ourselves that we are underlings."
