Report

This program was conducted by School of commerce in association with ACME, for all the students, this program is entrepreneurship development program on TREASURE FROM TRASH. Entrepreneurship Development Programs (EDPs) focus on nurturing entrepreneurial skills and fostering the creation of sustainable and innovative businesses. The concept of "Treasure from Trash" fits seamlessly within the framework of EDPs, as it promotes waste management solutions that are environmentally friendly, economically viable, and socially beneficial. By transforming waste into valuable products or services, entrepreneurs can tap into a growing market for sustainable solutions while addressing global environmental challenges.

This report explores how the "Treasure from Trash" initiative contributes to entrepreneurship development, its benefits, challenges, and successful examples of waste-to-wealth ventures.

Objectives of EDPs Focused on "Treasure from Trash"

1. Promoting Sustainable Business Models: To create businesses that focus on recycling, upcycling, and waste-to-energy, offering long-term solutions to environmental issues while generating profits.
2. Fostering Innovation and Creativity: To encourage entrepreneurs to develop innovative products and services using discarded materials, reducing dependence on raw materials and promoting circular economies.
3. Job Creation and Economic Growth: To support the development of waste-based ventures that generate employment, particularly in underdeveloped regions where waste is abundant but resources for employment are scarce.
4. Awareness and Education: To educate aspiring entrepreneurs about the opportunities within the waste management sector and provide technical and business training to turn ideas into viable businesses.

The "Treasure from Trash" initiative offers a transformative approach to entrepreneurship development, focusing on sustainability, innovation, and resource conservation. EDPs centered on this concept can provide aspiring entrepreneurs with the tools and knowledge needed to turn waste into wealth, creating positive environmental and economic impacts. By addressing challenges related to market education, technical skills, and funding, these programs can foster a new generation of green entrepreneurs capable of driving sustainable business practices globally.
