Detailed Report (minimum 500 words)

This orientation session is an introduction to interviewing skills for individuals who wish to attend an interview. The two hour session is aimed at information giving, advisory and fact-finding interviews. Supporting learners with their career development involves a wide range of people and activities from, learning about the world of work, gaining employability skills, developing an understanding of group dynamics, understanding their own motivation and drives, to developing their self-awareness and self-belief. Some of these activities can be very effectively achieved through group activities but others require a designated, one-to-one interview, where the learner is assured of your undivided attention, confidentiality and focus of attention on their development and future. The session is an introduction and awareness-raising session. To become proficient at attending interviews, students would need more practice, to gain feedback on skills and to undertake further development.
