Report:

PsyLight Club, Dept. of Psychology organizes awareness program on account of World Mental Health Day every year on 10th October. Theme for this year was Make mental health and well-being for all a global priority. Mental health should be promoted and importance of it to be explained to all. Following the legacy of promoting mental health, PsyLight Club in association with TREDA, Counselling and Training Centre organized Outreach program titled "Svastir" in two phases to bring awareness among public.

Phase I: Permission from Traffic police department was taken for the event. MSc Psychology students along with TREDA volunteers assembled in the decided and permitted venue, that is traffic signals in electronic city. Some of the students and volunteers were holding banners and placards in the signals for public to read. Others were issuing flyers about tips to improve mental health. Flyers were written in English and Kannada. For every red signal students and volunteers went to the public standing in signals, issued flyers and explained about the importance of the day and mental health.

Phase II: To build civic sense and social responsibility among youth Mental Health Ambassadors Cards were prepared. The event was executed in SFS Campus. MSc Psychology students went into each classroom of Under graduation and spoke about the importance of mental health and responsibilities to be taken over by youngsters to build healthy society.

Duties and responsibilities were explained, and consent was taken from UG students. Whoever was interested to become the ambassadors, details were collected and Pledge Cards were issued. Whatsapp group was created and these ambassadors were included in the group. The intention of the group is to increase the ambassadors and make them responsible for mental health.

Positive Outcome: Svastir means well-being. Building well-being among people is important to have a healthy society. Visibility is one strategy to make people think about it. Fast and stressful life has taken people far from mental health. Students were taught to initiate events to talk to people and explain to them. Social skills were improved by talking to public. Mental health ambassadors made all youth responsible for their actions. The event build confidence, civic sense, social responsibility and also work for the society.
