

The history of human civilization demonstrates that there has never been a society without the social conditions and circumstances known as social issues in sociology. However, as complex industrial-urban civilizations began to evolve, both the quantity and the severity of these issues grew. The emerging societal issues have also been greatly impacted by rapidly evolving technology. The societal issues that modern India is currently experiencing are covered in the book. Even though they are referred to as "social problems," the majority of these also involve cultural, psychological, economic, or political elements. The authors have so made an effort to examine these issues in their entirety. The effects of globalization on several facets of Indian culture, including gender discrimination, female foeticide / Infanticide, the agrarian crisis, farmers' suicides, "honour killings," internet abuse, ethnic conflict, and female foeticide / infanticide. Social responsibility is a major result of these activities where people own and claim the social, economic realities. It is not just of problems and solutions - This is about the hope a new understanding of social challenge.

ABSTRACT

The sector which is generally not governed by the regulations and laws laid by the government are known as Unorganised Sector. Generally these sectors are low paid, no proper leaves, no provident funds, no proper holidays and no medical benefits are given to the employees working on this sector. This sector constitutes more than 90% of the labour workforce in India and it also contributes 50% to the GDP (according to National Commission for Enterprises in the Unorganized Sector). These workers are receiving very low wages and employed on casual basis. Their working conditions are very poor due to which they are bound to live their lives below poverty. The paper deals with the problems of the labourer in the unorganised sector in India. The study also discusses the government measures for the upliftment of the workers of this sector and also gives some suggestions for their improvement.

INTRODUCTION

Performance of the economy will always depend upon the goods and services produced in the economy. Level of production will always depend upon the available resource in the economy whether it is natural resource or human resource. The way human resources are employed leads to the development and growth of the country. Economic growth of the country depends upon the nature of work and employment opportunities available in the country. Indian economy consists both formal and informal sectors. Employment in the unorganised sector is increasing day
