The department of Computer Science organized an "Language and Communication Skill Development" which was conducted to Second year students under the topic "How Strong Writing Skills Benefit Your Career" on DEC 10th, 2019. Faculty in charge was Prof. Dr. Smrithy Prasad with an intention of making the students the importance of Writing Skills.

Speaker Of the day introduces himself with his past and Present Experience in his career, then he starts explaining how important our Writing Skills and How it will help as

Are Writing Skills Necessary?

As it turns out, Writing Skills are incredibly important in the modern workplace. National Surveys of Business indicate that 82 percent of employers list the ability to communicate effectively as very important. When hiring recent college graduates, employers place the greatest priority on a "demonstrated proficiency in skills that cut across majors." Writing skills near the top of the list.

Speaker explained that initial round of interview in a corporate will be the writing also.

According to Burning Glass Technologies—a software company that mines data from employment ads to find real-time job trends—writing and communication skills are “scarce everywhere,” yet they are “in demand across nearly every occupation.”

Even in engineering and IT occupations, which many would not associate with strong requirements for writing skills, writing is the second-most-requested baseline skill, and these baseline skills account for one in four skills requested by other highly technical jobs like healthcare and finance. Despite the overwhelming demand for written communications skills, many students still face challenges forming sentences, choosing their words, and organizing their thoughts.

Finally the trainer ended up with students to write a paragraph about what you have interested in and students are more interested wrote the paragraph,they understood the keypoints how to show themselves as a good writer.

The session was highly fruitful and informative for students and faculty members. The college consistently encourages all the students and faculty to upgrade themselves in Writing Skills.
