The Department of Humanities as a part of extension activity, visited an NGO at Deepahalli named REDS which stands for Ragpickers Education and Development Scheme. REDS (Ragpickers Education & Development Scheme) is to empower uneducated and waste-picking children from the streets of Bangalore and Ranchi. REDS (Ragpickers Education & Development Scheme) REDS was initiated by an Inter-religious Dialogue Group REDS established as an organization with support of Bangalore Multi-purpose Social Society Service (BMSSS) The Marianist Trust, a registered charitable trust took over REDS from BMSSS.

The main aim of the visit is to mainly educate the students and the children at the NGO about the adoption of good norms for a good citizenship and to inculcate into the people's mind ideals of unity.

As part of extension activity, the students from final year BA were a part of it. Students gained a lot of exposure at the NGO and were involved with the children for various indoor activities. The final year students were allowed to visit the NGO for training the children at the NGO in various educational based assignments which will boost the knowledge to an extent.

Students were allowed to visit the NGO for field work for the children in teaching them basics in English and Mathematics. The students will be provided with certificates as a part of the training given to them.
