INTRODUCTION:

Utility of ICT in Education Information and Communication Technologies have recently gained ground in all the sectors of St. Francis de Sales College. Libraries are being computerised, E-Journals are first replacing the printed journals, E-learning platforms are providing teaching learning materials to both teachers and students. It has been observed that a high level effective use of ICT has brought tremendous change in the field of teaching and learning process in the following ways:

- ICT has a positive impact on student's performance
- Implementation of ICT enhances the motivation level of students towards teaching learning process
- Use of ICT tools helps students for completing their paperless assignment and video seminars
- ICT also helps teachers to work in teams and share ideas related to college curriculum.

OBJECTIVES:

The main objectives of the LT orientation were:

- i) to provide exposure to the faculty on Linways Technologies which they may use in teaching-learning and web based academic support; and
- ii) to provide hands on training to the faculty about creative use of such technological tools for providing innovative learning solutions.

METHODOLOGY :

The methodology of the orientation is as follows:

1. Duration of the workshop: The workshop was of short duration of three-days. This is in keeping with the time constraints of the faculty members, the session was conducted after the college hours.
2. Participants: The participants included the faculty members of St. Francis de Sales College. In order to give full focus on hands on practice, the session was conducted department wise. The emphasis will be on retaining the same group of participants throughout the year.
3. Resource Persons: The workshop was more hands-on practice oriented.
