Report:

The Department of Psychology, Postgraduate Centre engaged in an extension activity on 13th November 2021. The place of visit was SOS Children's Village, Bannerghatta Road, Bangalore. The students and faculty of the department was a part of "Zero Budget Natural Farming" project which was kickstarted on 13th of November, 2021 as a part of Children's Day. The aim of this activity was to provide students with the opportunity to engage and explore activities outside their curriculum and inculcate social commitment. Since the activity also involved sustainability, the department chose it to be a part of its yearly extension program. 11 students and 3 faculties of the postgraduate department of Psychology was part of the activity.

The day's activity began with an orientation to the students about SOS Children's Village by the village director, Mr. Baskaran. He opened his orientation by giving a brief about the history of SOS and its year of establishment. He then went on to discuss about the network of SOS across countries, how it differs from other children's homes and the various programs offered by them. Students were taken to a family home where they interacted with the members. This was followed by a brief introduction of "Zero Budget Organic Farming" concept and how the village decided to take up sustainability as one of its mottos. Mr. Baskaran, later, handed the session over to Mr. Ramchandra Murthy, who leads the project of zero budget farming at SOS. The students were then taken to the field where they were given a hands-on training and orientation on natural farming. Mr. Murthy explained in detail each and every step involved in natural farming. He showed different varieties of organic seeds and saplings to the students and also explained and showed them different ways to handle and plant them. The day's activity ended with a video session on natural farming.
